would judge, successfully.

We were much gratified by a personal inspection of the clean, siry steerage of this ship. Years ago when the subject of immigrant transportation we just beginning to attract public attention, this jourand was foremost in arging the policy of affording steerings passengers respectable necommodatic is, by steamship, at a moderate fare. Then the Cunard and Cottins lines would not touch that class of business; but the managers of this line, and promipent among them Mr. John G. Dale, saw the way to fortune opened. They advertised steerage passage at very low rates, with good, wholesome cooked meals for the passengers, and the couse-quence is, from a comparatively insignificant beinning their ships have grown into a fleet, second to none on the Atlantic, and we doubt if any other company reap handsomer divi dends. Instead of the clow sailing ship, with its six weeks or two months passage, and all its diandvantages of over-crowding, dirt, disease and destitution, and the great mortality which too often attended the night, on cleanly, roomy vessels, sit at a well spread board, and enjoy all the comforts which belong to civil led life, for a sum no greater than it used to cost on the miserable "old liners." The City of London is fitted for something over 100 cabin passengers, and from 600 to 800 steerage. Her officers are, Captain, P. C. Petrie; Chief Officer, G. MEN-YORK DAILY TRIBUNE, WEIGHTSHAY THEY SO 1839

For several days past there have been stopping at the Park Barrecks and now at the Battery, several soldiers belonging to the Sin regular infantry of the United States. Readers familiar with the history of military movements in Texas since the outbreak of the Rebellion, will remember that two hundred and seventy of these patriotic and gallant men were stationed in Texes, and that their officers described to the enemy. but these men with their sergeants, Hariss, Darken, Neal, Sheble, Relnhardt, McCormick, Brudy and Stapleton, were true to their country as the dial to the sun; they were alike insensi ble to flattery, bribery, premises of promotion, abase and efforts of intimidation. "Fritiful among the faithless," they stood by the stars and stripessubjected to bardships and privations that "try nen's souls," never deviating a hairs breadth from the direct path of duty and loyally-for the two years of their imprisonment. They were recently exchanged and are now in ur city. When we contrast their fidelity and patriotism with the treason of their officers, it so impossible to overestimate their merits. They deserve to be the guests of the nation, and their lovalty should be recognized by a public reception. They represent the common people-the bone and sinew-the backbone and the heart if not the brain of the community. They were anconditionally given up to the Rebel authorities by their superior officers on the 9th of May, 1861, and separated into squads and sent away to different points, on the frontier of Texas. There they were scantily supplied with rations and clothes, compelled to perform the most abject and humiliating labors, deprived of their pay, and often funished with stripes and chains. Recruiting officers from the bounties and commissions in the Confederate army if they would desert their flag. They spurned the bribe and remained true to their country. These efficers failed to seduce them. The gilded bat of secession did not tempt them from the path of duty. Such patriotism and such unfaltering fidelity marits recognition. Not a man of them voluntarily lett his post. Their officers had been educated, fed and clothed at the expense of the Government they betrayed and described. They claimed to be gentlemen of culture and high position, and looked apon these men as "mid sine" and plebians whom they could control by the mere force of will. They were missible taken.
